Congress is an independent and separate branch of government that takes a more active role in resource allocation decisions than the parliaments in GAOs case study countries. Many important decisions that, in the United States, are debated during the annual appropriations process occur in case study countries before the budget is presented for parliamentary approval. Also, most case study countries generally deal with the approval of obligations through executive branch controls whereas in the United States congressional approval ( budget authority ) is required before executive branch departments can obligate funds. Further, most case study countries used purely cash reporting for budgeting before adopting accrual budgeting. In contrast, the United States obligation-based budgeting already captures many obligations not apparent in a purely cash system. These differences are likely to influence perspectives on the trade-offs associated with the use of accrual budgeting, particularly in terms...
